

in against continuing his visit at Mr. Sickles' house, calling his attention to the fact that was much older than Mrs. Sickles, and ought not to pursue her, and assuring him that, unless he desisted, Mr. Sickles would desert him, and that in such an event consequences would be serious, if not fatal, to one or both of the parties. It is believed that this letter was found upon the body of Mr. Key before the coroner's inquest.
